We consider two household sector indicators. The first is the household credit-to-GDP gap - an exact analogue of the total credit-to-GDP gap but using only credit to households in the numerator. 5 The second is the difference between the household sector DSR and its 20-year rolling average (Drehmann et al (2017)). 6 By normalising with a one-sided trend or a rolling average, we try to mimic ...

Neoliberalism: Oversold? -- Finance & Development, June 2016

The Great Recession was a period of general economic decline observed in world markets during the late 2000s and early 2010s. The scale and timing of the recession varied from country to country. The International Monetary Fund concluded that the overall impact was the most severe since the Great Depression in the 1930s. The Great Recession stemmed from the collapse of the United States real ...

Within mainstream economics, economic bubbles, and in particular real estate bubbles, are not considered major concerns. [dubious – discuss] Within some schools of heterodox economics, by contrast, real estate bubbles are considered of critical importance and a fundamental cause of financial crises and ensuing economic crises. The pre-dominating economic perspective
